COURSE DESCRIPTION

At a time when borders between nations are so heavily defended, how do we understand the flow of people across those divides? This course considers the recent sociological literature on immigration, with a particular emphasis on the transnational movement of Latin Americans. We will examine how sociological scholarship has incorporated changing understandings of Latinx migration, based on consideration of immigrants’ demographics and motivations for relocating, the factors in sending and receiving countries that foster or hinder migration, and the processes of incorporation (or rejection) of immigrants at their destinations. We will take up the literature on transnationalism and examine the social mechanisms that make it possible for immigrants to maintain close ties with their countries of origin while simultaneously participating in the social life of their new locations. We will link migration to a wide range of related issues, including the global circulation of culture and economic resources, the growing facility of international travel and the barriers imposed by international borders, the technological innovations that facilitate instant contact with far-away places, and the global dissemination of information. Finally, we will discuss these various issues in the broader context of shifting U.S. immigration policies and politics.

GOALS:

- To understand the social, economic, cultural and economic forces that propel or hinder immigration across international borders, including the effects of social inequality and racialization.
- To discuss current issues in the sociological study of immigration, with a particular focus on Latin American immigrants and Latinx communities.
- To analyze how attitudes about transnational migration are formed and how they influence immigration policy.
COURSE REQUIREMENTS:

Students will be expected to:

- Do all required readings prior to each class session.

- Complete a closed-book, in-class midterm exam that will take place on Tuesday, October 23. The exam will consist of essay questions covering the material discussed during class sessions 1 to 7. I will provide further instructions on Canvas.

- Write two critical review essays, due Friday, November 9 and Friday, November 30. Students must submit an electronic copy of the critical review essay via Canvas and Turnitin before 5 PM on the due date. Further instructions for these assignments will be posted on Canvas.

- Attend class on a regular basis and participate in class discussion.

- Use the following format for all written assignments (except for the midterm): one-inch margins, double spaced, font: Times Roman 12. Include page numbers on all pages, and don’t forget to write your name on the first page.

In the case of the second essay, late papers will not be accepted unless you contact me before the essay is due and you have a medical excuse or comparably serious justification. Please note that there is no excuse for failing to keep electronic backups of your data (for example, on flash drives, CDs, external hard drives, or other computers) in case your primary computer fails or your hard drive crashes.

Attendance and participation:
You are expected to attend class. Attendance will be taken. Students are responsible for all material presented in the readings, films, lectures, and sections. You must come to class having already read the assigned readings for that day. Please bring your copies of the readings to lectures and sections so that you can refer to them during class. I strongly encourage you to ask questions and offer opinions and comments, both in lectures and during section. I see class discussion as an important component of adult learning.

I will make available some class materials on Canvas, but students are expected to attend class in order to learn the course material. Students are also expected to be not just physically present in the classroom but also mentally present. Students should not be otherwise occupied with email, texting, computer games, or other online activities that are not part of the class goals and activities.

Diversity of opinions:
In this course we will discuss several topics that can be controversial. Please keep in mind that you may be exposed to opinions that differ considerably from your own. Disagreement with the instructor or other students is fine, as long as you are respectful in how you present your own points of view.

Communication:
This course will use the Canvas course management system (http://www.it.northwestern.edu/education/login.html). You are responsible for logging in, checking regularly for posted announcements, and obtaining readings and assignments from the site. You will receive course announcements that will be sent to the students’ registered campus email address. You are responsible for checking your registered email accounts regularly.

Syllabus is subject to change:
This syllabus and schedule are subject to change in the event of unforeseen circumstances. I will post announcements of changes on Canvas and include them in email messages to students.

Academic integrity:
Academic integrity is fundamental for this course, and plagiarism and other forms of academic dishonesty will not be tolerated.

I strictly follow university regulations concerning academic integrity, which means that I report all suspected violations of the policy (including suspicion of cheating, plagiarism, fabrication, obtaining an unfair advantage, and aiding and abetting dishonesty) to the Assistant Dean for Advising and Academic Integrity, who then carries out a formal investigation. Please familiarize yourself with the university’s policy on academic integrity (see http://www.northwestern.edu/uacc/). You should understand that examples of plagiarism include obtaining text from any source (including the Internet), and passing off such text as your own work, rather than citing the source of the material. In addition, while I encourage students to collaborate when studying or learning course material or when working on any group projects, it should be clear that no collaboration is permitted on written work or exams, and any collaboration in those cases constitutes academic dishonesty.

If you have any questions about what constitutes plagiarism or academic dishonesty, I strongly encourage you to speak to me about it. Confirmed violations of academic integrity will result in both an administrative penalty and an academic penalty. The administrative penalty, assigned by university officials, typically is suspension for one quarter; any such suspension becomes part of your record, which is made available on request to potential employers and graduate school admissions committees. The academic penalty is assigned by the instructor and can severely affect your grade for the course.

Turnitin
This course makes use of Turnitin, a software program that compares your work against other texts in its database in order to safeguard academic integrity. Therefore you will be required to submit your written essays electronically via Canvas and Turnitin. All student work may be analyzed electronically for violations of the university’s academic integrity policy and may also be included in a database for the purpose of testing for plagiarized content. Please contact me if you have any questions about Turnitin.

Accessibility:
Any student with a documented disability needing accommodations is requested to contact the Accessible NU Center: http://www.northwestern.edu/accessiblenu/about-us/our-office/evanston-campus/index.html. Please also speak with me as early as possible in the quarter (preferably within the first two weeks of class). All discussions will remain confidential.

My office is wheelchair-accessible via a ramp from the parking lot in the back of the building. Let me know if you plan to drop by during office hours so that I can open the door to the building for you.

Make sure your cell phone is turned off or set to vibrate. Don’t engage in conversation with other students that is not part of the class discussion. Please keep to a minimum interruptions and distractions caused by late arrivals or early departures.

Class materials and lectures
Students are prohibited from selling (or being paid for taking) notes during this course to or by any person or commercial firm without my express written permission. No audio or video recordings of class are permitted without my permission.
